

Information Kit for the 2007 New South Wales General Election

The electoral landscape has changed significantly since the last NSW General election in March 2003. State electoral boundaries have been redrawn and legislation covering the electoral process has changed.

This Information Kit details the effects of these changes, and provides comprehensive profiles of each New South Wales electoral district. Each profile includes the swing needed for the seat to change hands at the March 2007 General election and the statistical profile from the Australian Bureau of Statistics based on the 2001 Census data.

The Kit has been designed to provide the key electoral facts and figures for the media, candidates and members of the public interested in this General election. Further information on elections and the electoral system can be found on the NSWEC website at www.elections.nsw.gov.au
